

XM satellite radio is the future of radio. After being a subscriber for nearly two years, I am an avid supporter of XM satellite radio and its subsidiaries. It is nothing against the local radio stations, I just travel and it is nearly impossible to keep a station tuned in. The local stations are still good it is just worth the monthly fee for commercial and static free. XM satellite radio reaches more people and cultures than anyone can possibly imagine with their seemingly infinite number of genres. The latest addition to the station selection is the instant traffic and weather which is amazing. The only reason I listen to it is because they are up to the minute, I dont have to wait 30 min for the traffic update and weather from a local station. XM gives the person the chance to listen to what they want, when they want it. You day have to sit through all the commercials and bs talk if you dont want too. XM is just like a cable and sattelite provider for TV, who doesn't always carry the local TV stations on their service. Almost exactly. XM should be untouched and other radio stations should follow sattelite radio's exaple. IMPROVE THEMSELVES. Not dismantle others.

Thanks,
